

KLRI Journal of Law and Legislation (KJLL)

CALL FOR PAPERS

KLRI Journal of Law and Legislation is currently accepting manuscripts from legal scholars, researchers, practitioners, and governmental staff members.

The Journal is biannually published (May/November) by Korea Legislation Research Institute (KLRI) with the aims of:

- (1) providing a forum for discussion and exchange of ideas in the field of legislation to the researchers, scholars and practitioners;
- (2) promoting research on and enhancing the understanding of legislative systems across the world, especially those of Korea and Asia; and
- (3) supporting research, scholarship, and legislative practices by comparatively analyzing the latest issues in law and legislation of Korea and of the world.

We welcome articles, book reviews, notes on any topic on law and legislation of Korea/Asia or of other parts of the world relevant to or in comparison with Korea/Asia.

[Proposal and Manuscript Submission Due]

	Proposal Due	Manuscript Due
No.1 (May 31)	November 30	December 31
No.2 (Nov. 30)	May 31	June 30

Submitted proposals will be subject to the editorial screening, and manuscripts are to be double-blind peer-reviewed before determined to be published. Submissions made after the due will be considered for publication in the next issue. All submissions must be made to the Managing Editor.

Authors whose papers are published for publication will be paid a fixed sum of honorarium in accordance with the Journal's internal regulation.

For further guideline, please see the attached General Guideline. For more information on KLRI and its publications, please visit <http://www.klri.re.kr>
